I want to implement a shake the phone feature for the user. I want the variable that represents the user shaking to be accessible from the game itself. I have declared it as a global variable and assigned it a value of a shake event which gets triggered when the player touches the screen. But I cannot seem to access it from the rest of the game. Here is the JavaScript code: //PlayerOne is declared as a global variable at the beginning of the script. PlayerOne.prototype.getSymbol = function(event) { // event is the touch event (touchstart, mousedown, etc.) // Find the coordinates of the event within the node var coordinates = event.touches[0].pageX; // Find the location of the symbol within the node var symbolX = this.imgSymbol.x; var symbolY = this.imgSymbol.y; //If the symbol is out of bounds, simply return null if (coordinates > symbolX || coordinates > symbolY || coordinates < 0.2; this.imgSymbol.className = 'shake'; return shake; } return null; }; How do I 2d92ce491b
