Leadership is a lifestyle. Many people think leadership is about getting things done, but it's actually a lifestyle. Maxwell points out that you don't just do things. You are the thought leader who spends time thinking about the big ideas, using logic and science to determine the best approaches to problems. It is a mindset, as well as a skill, that has to be mastered. Leaders, he points out, are more than planners; they are thinkers. In his new book, Leadership Is a Lifestyle, Maxwell offers his latest thinking on leadership. The principles and techniques he provides have been tested. He knows, as many others do not, the principles of leadership and how they translate into people's lives. He uses those principles to model his own leadership
