I've googled it a bit, and found there's a SetBackColor(Color) but it only applies to the whole control, not individual TextBoxes. I've tried it on the ListView's forecolor and backgroundcolour, but they don't seem to have any effect. I've also tried inheriting the ListView, but it didn't affect anything. Any ideas? A: I actually solved it with a System.Windows.Forms.Button :P Systemic and local therapy against the epidermal growth factor receptor in the treatment of cancer and cancer stem cells. Overexpression and mutation of the epidermal growth factor receptor (EGFR) gene is frequently associated with the neoplastic transformation of epithelial cells and the progression of human cancer. Although EGFR is implicated in the growth, metastasis and angiogenesis of numerous solid tumors, no conventional anti-cancer drugs that target the EGFR have yet been approved for clinical use. Attempts to develop small molecule inhibitors that target the EGFR have proved difficult because most inhibitors developed to date lack inhibitory activity due to poor binding to the kinase domain of the receptor. More potent anti-EGFR therapy requires the development of targeted antibody constructs that block both the extracellular and intracellular domains of EGFR in combination with optimized chemotherapy 09e8f5149f

Ileana Ros-Lehtinen's withdrawal of her 2007 endorsement of Barack Obama may have less to do with her political loss than with her loss of a close friend to cancer. At least that's what Ros-Lehtinen wants her friends to think. Ever since the Miami congresswoman announced this month that she was backing Mitt Romney, she's been touting her relationship with Michelle Obama. The two women were
