What you need to know: Open Source: License: Price: Free Today's free stock trading software selection is host to a number of applications that track the performance of the stock market, giving you an idea of which trading strategy will be profitable. These days, finding a free stock trading software is more difficult than finding a free toilet seat. There are plenty of good stock trading software applications available on the market today. Many of them are simple, while others are designed with advanced tools to facilitate higher-level stock trading. It's up to you to choose which one will be the best fit for your own needs. Of course, if you're going to be trading on the same platform for more than a couple of weeks, you'll want to invest in a reliable program that provides you with all the features you need. But if you are a casual investor looking to give yourself a chance at a buck or two from time to time, then you probably don't need to shell out for a sophisticated piece of software. No doubt about it, there are numerous free stock trading applications on the market today that you can try. The one you choose will likely depend on your personal needs. The first step in choosing the right application for you is to make a list of your goals, so you know which aspects of stock trading you are looking to incorporate into your own program. Don't overlook the importance of user-friendly interfaces and quick charting. Yes, you'll have to pay for software that allows you to make trades without having to consult a professional, but you may be able to pick up some useful tricks from a program that makes trading easy. After all, if you want to be able to trade your stock positions without having to get tied up in knots over whether your brokerage will clear your trade or not, you may need a program that makes it as simple as possible for you to do so. Besides user-friendliness, other factors include the quantity of data you'll need access to and the number of standard charts available within the program. If you're going to be investing in a lot of different stock positions, you'll want to be able to navigate the financial charts in a variety of ways. If you're not going to be making many stock trades, you don't need to spend any extra money on stock
