

The team from EA SPORTS has also worked closely with the German Football Association (DFB) and the German Football Association to ensure the official DFB's training kits and player kits for the new season of Bundesliga and DFL Pokal Football matches as well as the 2014 FIFA World Cup are designed to look sleek on the field with the highest level of comfort for players. FIFA 18 was produced with the help of the Adidas "UltraBOOST" football boot to look particularly authentic and breathable during gameplay, and several previous FIFA games have used similar boots with a football boot type worn by the players. This year the team has worked with the DFB to ensure that their players wear the "Play Ultra" football boot by New Balance. The "Play Ultra" football boot has an athletic appearance with a ventilated and flexible upper that helps players to feel relaxed and comfortable in the boot. In addition, the "Play Ultra" football boot features New Balance's "Unitouch" system which accurately measures each step of the player's foot during gameplay, provides the highest level of comfort and support and provides measurements of each step taken throughout the match. HyperMotion also introduces a new set of animation-based controls, which will enable players to guide and shoot more realistic passes by allowing them to control them in a more dynamic way. Players will be able to see where their pass is heading and with more refined controls, feel just like they would when passing the ball in a real match, allowing them to play more naturally. Players will be able to control their players' feet more dynamically by being able to accelerate and decelerate their character much faster. In addition, HyperMotion Technology improves AI behaviours of players on the pitch. This new system uses the data collected from real-life matches to update the AI in FIFA, giving them more emotional responses and instincts. "HyperMotion Technology is not only a refinement of existing game systems but a new gameplay system that's developed in collaboration with the DFB, and we're confident it will offer our fans new ways to experience the excitement of football," said Matthew Wood, Executive Producer of FIFA 18. "The HyperMotion team have been working closely with our player motion capture suit manufacturer to create an all-new control system that will deliver real-time interaction for the player," said EA SPORTS senior gameplay director Richard Wilson. ♦

What's new:

- Define your playstyle - Change the way your team plays with the new man-on-ball interaction. With this new mechanic, defend your space as you attack. Send your teammates in with clever combination play, attacking through dummy runs and set-pieces. Fight over the ball as you keep possession, or pass it out to open spaces. Even if you do end up scoring, using these finishers can lead to some amazing action. See how your game plays out.
- Play your attacking style - If you like to use clever, on-the-run dribbling moves, then you'll enjoy turning your defence into a charge for your attacks in this game. Use new turns to change direction, attack and open up space for your teammates to run through into open spaces. Even if you are a creative goalscorer, make the most of the new mechanics by laying on chances for those around you. Whoever you play as, making others matter is even more exciting than before.
- Explore unique ways to express your personality - Let loose and try new tricks in this game. Use higher and lower kicks as both a wide or long distance attacker. Change direction in mid-air, then control the ball to finish anywhere you choose in the air with attacks and tricks. Slide the ball into open pockets, roll out of tackles, run over defenders, and adjust your dribbling pace by collecting the ball at different speeds, all with a host of unique player-to-player animations. The gameplay promotes a more fluid style of football and provides you with new ways to express your creativity.
- You can even play off the ball - The beautiful game is back and you get to take part in it. No more living life from your ball, or talking to yourself. The new Player Interaction system allows you to play a whole new ball game. Get forward, start your own pace as you work for the ball, get the ball to open spaces, and let your teammates rely on your on-the-run ability. Everyone plays the best they can with their teammates, opponents and the environment. Whether you float in off the left wing or slide one-two touches past opponents; your game will be different this time.
- Individual and team tactics - Use multiple skills to make your mark
